Jacques Luben was born in Paris, France. As a child his parents moved him to New York City where he earned a French Baccalaureate and developed strong proficiency in several languages.

After earning a B.A. in International Relations from the University of Pennsylvania and an MBA from Columbia University, Jacques embarked on a career as a commodities trader with two major Wall Street firms from 1979 to 1985.

In 1985, he accepted the position of Executive Director of Platinum Guild International (USA). The latter is a major London based trade association with offices in 7 countries. Jacques' tenure in this role lasted 15 years.

At Platinum Guild, he led a mining industry effort to encourage several major Government Mints to create and promote coins that are produced from pure platinum bullion. This project culminated with the introduction of innovative coin programs sponsored by the nations of Canada, Australia, China and France. In 1997, the United State Mint launched the highly successful Platinum Eagle coin program that is still being operated by the United States Treasury Department.

Platinum Guild established a high-profile media presence to advance its goals. As a result Jacques was interviewed frequently by The New York Times, CNN, CNBC, The Wall Street Journal and other business outlets.

In 2000, Jacques joined Inc. Plan (USA), a firm that his partner Caroline Quigley founded in 1990. Over the years, Inc.
